

From 19th until 28th of July 2022, 5 partner Universities implemented NORDPLUS project – Intensive course on Sustainability and Security. The aim of this course was to train students and give them knowledge about security. Also it was very important to introduce students to sustainability topic as nowadays security is not possible without sustainable development.

Leo Ronkainen, student from LAUREA University of Applied Sciences: "So, having spent those 10 days, what were we left with? The immediate response that comes to mind is people. Again, this might be a product of the covid times, but I know no one from my class after a year and half besides my group. The fact that we had multiple students from safety, security, and risk management courses that I never had even dreamt of interacting with makes me few parts sad, few parts happy.

They usually say that traveling expands one's horizons. But if travel expands, then I suppose it is fair to say that studying abroad blows those horizons wide open."

NORDPLUS programme covers organisational costs of the course, travel and subsistence costs for students and teachers. This is great opportunity for those students who can't afford to travel with their own resources.
